Abstract: About 60% to 70% of people with dementia have Alzheimer's Disease (AD), a neurodegenerative illness. One reason for this disorder is the misfolding of naturally occurring proteins in the human brain, specifically β -amyloid ($A\beta$) and tau. Certain diagnostic imaging techniques, such as amyloid PET imaging, tau PET imaging, Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI), Computerized Tomography (CT), and others, can detect biomarkers in blood, plasma, and cerebral spinal fluids, like an increased level of β -amyloid, plaques, and tangles. In order to create new pharmacotherapeutics for Alzheimer's disease, researchers must have a thorough and detailed knowledge of amyloid beta misfolding and other related aspects. Donepezil, rivastigmine, galantamine, and other acetylcholinesterase inhibitors are among the medications now used to treat Alzheimer's disease. Another medication that can temporarily alleviate dementia symptoms is memantine, which blocks the N-methyl-D-aspartate (NMDA) receptor. However, it is not able to halt or reverse the progression of the disease. Medication now on the market can only halt its advancement, not reverse it. Interventions to alleviate behavioral and psychological symptoms, exhibit anti-neuroinflammation and anti-tau effects, induce neurotransmitter alteration and cognitive enhancement, and provide other targets have recently been developed. For some Alzheimer's patients, the FDA-approved monoclonal antibody, aducanumab, is an option; for others, phase 3 clinical studies are underway for drugs, like lecanemab and donanemab, which have demonstrated potential in eliminating amyloid protein. However, additional study is required to identify and address these limitations in order to reduce the likelihood of side effects and maximize the therapeutic efficacy.

1. INTRODUCTION

Worldwide, the number of adults aged 60 and above will reach nearly 2.1 billion by 2050, with the majority residing in low- and middle-income nations, according to the World Health Organization (WHO). However, experts project that the number of individuals aged 80 and more will treble, reaching 426 million, during the same time span [1]. In 2015, 46.8 million people throughout the world were living with dementia, and the societal cost of dementia was estimated to be $818 billion, according to the World Alzheimer Report. Between 60 and 70% of dementia cases may be attributed to Alzheimer's Disease (AD), the most common kind of dementia [2]. One of the greatest healthcare concerns of the 21st century is Alzheimer's Disease (AD), the leading cause of dementia. There will likely be 40 million people living with dementia by the year 2050, and experts project that number will double every 20 years until then [3]. The prevalence of dementia in the elderly has prompted a surge of studies aimed at finding a cure. This is due to the fact that more and more individuals are getting dementia, especially Alzheimer's Disease (AD), even though people are living longer. Considering the timelines of the progressive improvements in our understanding of age-related dementia, from the first observation of dementia symptoms in Aguste D (1901), Alois Alzheimer's first report on the case of Aguste D (1906), Emil Kraepelin first naming the disease as Alzheimer's disease (1910), George Glenner and Cai'ne Wong's identification of beta-amyloid (1984), and identification of tau protein (1986), to the approval of aducanumab (AduhelmTM) by FDA (2021) and the human brain vascular

Subject : Regarding Online deposit of fee, 18% GST & University's share of interest, etc.

This is to inform you that the University has implemented online fee payment system from 14-9-2018 onwards.

In this connection, the University has requested to all Constituent & Affiliated Colleges vide letter No. 06-BFUHS(Colleges-C8)/2018/20471-623 dated 14-9-2018, letter No. 06-BFUHS(Colleges-C8)/2018/24770-96 dated 26-10-2018, letter No. 06-BFUHS(Colleges-C8)/2018/31656-806 dated 5-12-2018 & letter No.06-BFUHS(Colleges-C8)/2019/10860-11005 dated 31-5-2019 to deposit all the fee, 18% GST, University's share of interest, etc. through Online Mode in the University Account and no fee will be accepted through RTGS, NEFT, Demand Drafts/cheques etc.

It has been observed that a few affiliated Colleges have sent fee through Demand Drafts which will not be accepted by the University.

You are, therefore, again requested to deposit all the fee, 18% GST and University's share of interest, etc. through University Online System [www.bfuhs.ac.in => University online system => pay fee online => College Payment Portal (INS, AFF, ADMN EXP ETC)] in the University Account.

It has also been observed that few Colleges neither intimated to the University after depositing fee through Online Mode in the University Account nor sent a print of e-receipt to the University and few Colleges have not mentioned correct Mobile number of Principal. Therefore, the University could not verify the Online Fee receipt from the University Payment Portal and the dues remain outstanding against the College in the University record.

Few affiliated Colleges also not deposited fee under prescribed fee head and also GST under GST head separately which is required to deposit under prescribed fee head and GST head separately.

Therefore, you are requested to enter correct Mobile Number of Principal, deposit fee under prescribed fee head and GST under GST head separately and intimate to the University and also send a print of e-receipt (online Transaction acknowledgement fee receipt) by email/by post to avoid any discrepancy in future.

ABSTRACT

Diabetes mellitus is a metabolic disorder characterized by elevated blood sugar levels and related complications. This study focuses on harnessing and integrating fragment-based drug design and virtual screening techniques to explore the antidiabetic potential of newly synthesized thiazolidine-2,4-dione derivatives. The research involves the design of novel variations of thiazolidine-2,4-dione compounds by Fragment-Based Drug Design. The screening process involves pharmacophore based virtual screening through docking algorithms, and the identification of newly twelve top-scoring compounds. The molecular docking analysis revealed that compounds SP4e, SP4f showed highest docking scores of -9.002 and -10.345 . The binding free energies of the compounds SP4e, SP4f and pioglitazone was found to be -19.9 , -16.1 and -13 respectively, calculated using the Prime MM/GBSA approach. The molecular dynamic study validates the docking results. Furthermore, In the Swiss albino mice model, both SP4e and SP4f exhibited significant hypoglycaemic effects, comparable to the reference drug pioglitazone. Furthermore, these compounds demonstrated favorable effects on the lipid profile, reducing total cholesterol, triglycerides, and LDL levels while increasing HDL levels. In mice tissue, the disease control group showed PPAR- γ expression of 4.200 ± 0.24 , while compound SP4f displayed higher activation at 7.04 ± 0.43 compared to compound SP4e with an activation of 7.60 ± 0.65 . In zebrafish model, SP4e and SP4f showed significant reductions in blood glucose levels and lipid peroxidation, along with increased glutathione levels and catalase activity. These findings highlighted the potential of SP4e and SP4f as antidiabetic agents, warranting further exploration for therapeutic applications. The in vitro study was performed in HEK-2 cell line, the pioglitazone group demonstrated PPAR- γ expression of $EC_{50} = 575.2$, while compound SP4f exhibited enhanced activation at $EC_{50} = 739.0$ in contrast to compound SP4e activation of $EC_{50} = 026.7$.

1. Introduction

Diabetes mellitus (DM) is a metabolic disorder characterized by elevated blood sugar levels and associated complications due to inadequate insulin secretion, impaired insulin action, or a combination of both [1]. Type 1 diabetes mellitus (T1DM) arises from the destruction of pancreatic beta cells by autoimmunity, resulting in insulin deficiency [2]. On the other hand, type 2 diabetes mellitus (T2DM) involves varying degrees of insulin resistance, impaired insulin secretion, beta-cell damage, and increased liver glucose production [3].

Maintaining glucose homeostasis relies on the delicate balance between insulin and glucagon, which regulate blood glucose concentrations. Insulin signalling promotes glucose uptake, utilization, and storage in various tissues, while glucagon stimulates glucose production and fat breakdown [4]. Numerous compounds have been developed to modulate glucose regulation in different organs, including the pancreas, liver, muscles, and adipose tissue. Traditional treatments for DM encompass insulin therapy and oral antidiabetic agents such as sulfonylureas, biguanides, thiazolidinediones (TZDs), and α -glucosidase inhibitors [5].

Among these treatments, thiazolidinedione derivatives (TZDs) have emerged as a valuable class of pharmacologically active compounds
